Games for Group Engagement

Friday March 30

If handled well, games and activities can serve multiple purposes in a group. They can be a tool for creating a relaxed, focussed learning culture; for engagement, for building relationships and for self reflection.

At the end of the workshop you will have skills to

- Raise spontaneity and fun
- Use games and activities to build relationships
- Assess suitability of games in line with purpose
- Adapt and use games for diverse participants
- Debrief games and activities
- Minimize and manage risk
- Plan to use games at your next activity

Learn by doing, reflecting, discovering and applying knowledge and skills to work situations.

For Trainers, facilitators, psychologists, community workers, service providers, H.R practitioners, counselors, creative performers.
